In a paragraph of 150 words write about someone you know who had to face a lot of hardships in their professional life but managed to make the best of a bad situation with a positive attitude.

I know a man named Rajesh who worked as a clerk in a small office. He lost his job during the COVID-19 pandemic, and it was a very hard time for him. With no income, he had to sell his bike and borrow money to take care of his family. Many people would have given up, but Rajesh stayed strong. He decided to start a small business from home by selling homemade snacks. At first, he didn't earn much, but he didn't lose hope. Slowly, his snacks became popular in the neighborhood. He used social media to reach more customers. Within a year, he started earning more than he did at his old job. Rajesh now employs two helpers and plans to open a small shop. His story teaches us that with a positive attitude and hard work, we can turn tough times into success. He truly inspired me.

Gender discrimination continues to this day in most parts of the world. In a paragraph of 150 words write about what gender discrimination means to you and how you would combat it from a leadership position.

To me, gender discrimination means treating someone unfairly because they are a boy or a girl. It means not giving equal chances to girls just because they are girls, or not letting boys do something because it is seen as a girl's job. This is not right. Boys and girls should be treated the same. Everyone should get equal respect, love, and chances to learn and grow. If I become a leader, I will make sure that both boys and girls can do all types of work. I will listen to everyone and not ignore someone because of their gender. I will tell others that girls can be strong and smart just like boys. I will also stop people from making fun of others because of their gender. I believe all people are equal. If we work together, we can stop gender discrimination and make the world fair for all.

In a paragraph of 150 words, write about one or two employees you know or have heard of who quit their job to find another one to suit their temperament.

I once heard about a man named Rakesh who worked in a large IT company. Although the job paid well, he found the work environment too stressful and fast-paced for his calm and thoughtful nature. He was often expected to handle multiple tasks at once and attend long meetings, which made him feel drained. After two years, Rakesh decided to quit and look for a job that suited his personality better. He eventually found work at a small publishing house, where the atmosphere was quieter and the tasks more focused. He now edits manuscripts, works with writers, and enjoys the peace and creativity of his new role. Similarly, a woman named Priya left her marketing job to become a yoga instructor. She wanted a more meaningful and balanced life. Both Rakesh and Priya found happiness after choosing careers that matched their inner nature and temperament.
